Professional Development/Partnership School Tuition Scholarship
Sponsored by Bank of America and the University of South Florida College of Education

The College of Education is pleased to announce a scholarship opportunity made possible by funding from Bank of America. Eligible recipients are those teachers who teach in a University of South Florida College of Education Professional Development/Partnership School. The scholarship will cover the cost of tuition cost for a three-hour graduate course at the in-state rate. The applicant must be employed as a faculty member and actively involved in a College of Education Professional Development/Partnership School, and have the support of the principal or designee(s). The applicant must be a student in a degree seeking graduate program or a student taking graduate courses as a non-degree seeking student and in both cases in academic good standing. Applicants must register for a course that will broaden their content and/or pedagogical knowledge and add to their classroom effectiveness. The award will be transferred to Financial Aid and be deducted from the recipient’s tuition bill.
